THE RATES we have established for advertising will be stractly adhered to be every instance. They are as low as charged by a majority of the papers in the West, and as low as any paper farmished on a firm and lasting basis, with a large circulation, will do business. We think business men can get value received by advertising with us. We ask no one to patronize us out of charity, and do not want a man's money unless we give him value received. We could easily fill our columns with foreign advertisements, humburgs, patent medicines, etc., at less than our regular rates. But we hope that we never will be compelled to do so. Nothing speaks so well for a town and the enterprise of its clittens—its growth and pressperity—as the columns of the beal paper well filled, with home albertisements or home trade and business. We shall charge all alike, foreign and local, and shall not deviate from our established rates. No display type larger than the established rates. The poor boy, who was frightened at this, thought it better not to go home at all, but took his bottle, buried it under a tree, and ran away. He went among the soldiers, where he distinguished himself so that he became an officer. When one day his regiment was quartered at this small town the officer thought proper to pay a visit to his old boss, but not before he got the bottle of beer which he had buried some years before under the tree. When he entered he said, "Well, sir, man present the appearance of a ray- here I bring you your bottle of Bamburg beer that you sent me for."
